Marching for the Voting Rights Act and working with Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta to organize the grape and lettuce boycotts taught me that with people power we can win change.

Listening to new members and potential members, we can grow and strengthen our association, build strong alliances with our communities, and create the schools our students deserve.

Our mission — advocating for education professionals and uniting our members and the nation to fulfill the promise of public education — has guided me during my first term on the NEA Executive Committee.

By organizing around racial justice and educator voice, we can increase the number of activists and leaders in our association and overcome all challenges.
